Lunch today: brown and wild rice, diced avocados, diced tomatoes, grated cheddar cheese. Carrot/orange/beet/pear juice.

By the whirr of their juicers shall ye know them.

I'm bored and the office is empty today.

This looks like a good idea.

Oh. Other than the avocados, that sounds yummy. Yummier than my boring sandwich, anyway.

I had souvlaki, pita and tzatziki leftovers from last night. Nom nom nom. And it could be worse, everyone and their pet dog is in my office today. *rolls eyes* Wanna trade? You can close my case files. . .

Dried avocados? I mean, I believe that such a thing could exist, but I don't think I've ever even imagined it, let alone heard of it. I am intrigued.

I believe it says "diced avocados".

Well look at that, it sure does.

<tries to figure out how my brain turned "diced" to "dried", especially when the former makes so much more sense than the latter>

That's okay, I thought he was drinking carrot/orange/beer juice.

You too, huh?

April 21 2009, 05:10:40 UTC COLLAPSE

Me too.

For me, I think it's because it was beet/pear and my brain likes to transpose things (mostly numbers, though it swaps the occasional letter pair) and with last letter swapped it became beer/peat... until I went Waitaminit! can't be peat, Backitup! and read it again.

*thinking* Mmmm... mashed avocado on whole wheat bread (typed whole what bread before I proofread) What deliciousness! I'll have to see if there are decent avocados at the market tomorrow.

I love reading your recipe and food posts.

Probably the same way that my brain thought the previous recipe was for "World's easiest chilled spicy Q saoba" ...

Anyway, they're so oily, I bet you would have to cure them.

Dried avacados, carrot/orange/beer juice, and chilled spicy saoba...the lot of us have obviously got some reading comprehension and/or vision problems going on right now.
